Appomattox County . . .
Yesterday And Today

by Paul Ghioto

Appomattox County has many "old-line" families as well as many "new" families within its boundaries. The reasons these people have come here from points north, south, east and west are many and varied. Town Councilman Ronald Spigle's grandparents, Paul and Annie Brown, finally settled in Appomattox County after several years of Oklahoma residence and thus prove an interesting case in point.

Paul Sandston Brown was born in Fairfax County in 1874 and in 1903 married Buckingham native Annie Evelyn Wade. After a year's residence in Philadelphia, the young marrieds decided to try their hand at homesteading in the midwestern Territory of Oklahoma. Following a final visit to the Wades, Paul and his wife bade them a tearful farewell and began their westward trip by train from the Appomattox depot in 1904.

They disembarked at Oklahoma City and proceeded northwestward to Grand, then the Day County seat. Staking a claim to 160 acres seven miles south of Grand, the Browns discovered that they had seventy-five cents in their pockets, a team of horses, a wagon, and a few scanty other possessions.

Their first "pioneer" home was a "dug-out" which was later replaced by a frame building purchased from a family which left the area. The project of "housemoving" was accomplished through the use of four wagons and eight horses.

Despite the usual early hardships encountered by all settlers, the Browns prospered, increasing their land holdings to an eventual total spread of 320 acres. The family's size also increased as three children were born - Joe in 1905, Emmett in 1910 and Edna in 1911.

Trips to the Ellis County fair at Shattuck, homemade ice cream in the hot summer months and rides in their new - and novel - 1915 Model "T" became happy memories for the Browns. In 1915, increased talk of Virginia's sparkling mountain springs, wild blackberry vines and the folks back home convinced them to sell their Oklahoma holdings. Leaving behind the dry climate and frequent cyclone scares, they headed back East. On a Sunday morning in November, 1915, the Appomattox depot came into sight once again.

At first the Browns rented property from Miss Ida Jones near Liberty Chapel. Then, lured by a job offer, Paul took his family with him to Hopewell where he worked in a munitions factory until the close of World War I.

Life in Virginia began to disenchant the family and plans were made to move back to Oklahoma. These plans however were shelved once "Grandma" Brown convinced her son that if he moved back west she might never see him again.

Returning to Central Virginia, the Browns rented property and a home from Mrs. Alice Trudelle for a short while in Buckingham. The final move was made sometime in 1920 or 1921 when the Tanyard place owned by Charles Thornhill was rented. Here, at Tower Hill, was established "Paul S. Brown General Merchandise", a business run until 1950 when he retired at age 76.

Buying trips to Lynchburg were all-day affairs but were necessary if the store shelves were to remain stocked with the goods Paul Brown's customers wanted.

Paul Brown died at 83 in August, 1957 followed by his wife Annie in March, 1968. In their lifetimes they never did make it back to Oklahoma though their son Emmett finally did in 1974. While there, old family friends conducted him on a tour of the Brown homestead, pointing out among other things the ruins of the old "dug-out".

If the Browns were alive today they might only laugh if you said American society was becoming more and more mobile. After travelling thousands of miles and living in numerous places they had returned to Virginia. True citizens of Appomattox, they contributed their share to the county's heritage . . . yesterday.

TOPS News

by Barbara Mayberry, Reporter

Weight is a relative concept, and things heavy on earth may be light on other planets. For example, just a few grains of dust from the star Sirius in your salt shaker would cause the table on which the shaker stands to collapse, and probably the floor under it! So the next time you feel like complaining about your weight, just think of Sirius!

TOPS SPOTLITE is on two members this week. Diane Waldo, who joined TOPS on Feb. 3, 1975, reached her goal on May 26, 1975, after losing a total of nine pounds. Doris Nash, TOPS leader, has also reached her goal. Doris joined TOPS on Nov. 4, 1974, and on June 2, 1975, with a total loss of 43 pounds, went below her goal! Except for two gains, Doris weighed in with a loss every week until she reached her goal! TOPS is very proud of these two members!

TOPS QUEEN FOR THE MONTH OF MAY is Collen Bell. Runner-up is Norma Reynolds. Receiving honorable mention, with at least a five pound loss, is Celia Beamer, Elaine Carson, Amy Christian, Elvira Hancock, Judy Johnson, Patsy Jamerson, and Ruth Trent.

Those who received jewelry were Cindy Almond, Marie Carson, Ted Carter, Mildred Coleman, Kirkie Hamlin, Delsie Harrup, Barbara Mayberry, Bobbie Mullins, Ann Reynolds, Norma Reynolds, Willie Reynolds, Colena Roberts, and Lois Smith.

TOPS had three new members to join, making a total of 58. They are Celia Beamer, Rita Page and Lena Page. Welcome to the club, ladies!

Returning members were Elaine Stanley and Louise Cox.

TOPS TIP FOR THE WEEK is to always carry a few individual packages of artificial sweetner and diet salad dressing in your handbag so as not to be at the mercy of restaurants or coffee shops for these items!

TOPS next meeting will be Monday night, 6:30 p.m., at the Plaza Farmer's National Bank.

HINT: PAINT REMOVAL

The last time I used a paint remover, I decided to think over every step before I started; and I wrote down each one while I did it. Here they are:
Remove hardware - Mask any areas to protected - Cover floors with several layers of newspaper - Read directions on lab el - Be generous with remover. A heavy coat gives faster, more thorough penetration - Apply remover only to an area you can clean off quickly. Too large an area causes drying out and hardening of the loosened area - Do not work in direct sunlight - When removing film, scrape in the same direction as the grain - To clean remover from grooves and crevices, use a narrow strip of rag or twine well twisted. Steel wool can also be used wrapped around twine - Saving wire across old can and use it to clean sludge from brush or knife - Clean wood thoroughly with alcohol type solvent.

After your successful paint removal, see us for a complete selection of American Best Quality Varnishes and Stains.

Appomattox County Library

by Verna Conner

Did you know that your County Library subscribes to 25 or more magazines? Among these are Better Homes and Gardens, Good Housekeeping, National Georgraphic, Reader's Digest, Science Digest, Sports Illustrated, Newsweek, Time, U.S. News and World Report, Virginia Record, Virginia Wildlife, Ebony, Southern Living, Changing Times, Consumer Report, and Consumer Research and Ironworker.

The Library attic is a veritable treasure house to anyone doing research. There one can find such magazines as Life, National Geographic and Saturday Evening Post as far back as 1958. For lack of space, some of these have been placed on shelves in the basement. This is not a good place for them as they are apt to mold or get very soiled. The basement walls need something done to them to keep out the dampness.

It could then be used for so many things including "Story Hour" which is at present operating under difficulties.

The upper story has been condemned by the insurance company as a fire hazard and not more than four children are allowed up there at one time. Since all the children's books are on that floor this really presents a problem. The room across from the office is filled to overflowing with audio-visual material and table for mending books so very little space is available but with the resourcefulness of all librarians they let as of now, having the three and four year olds come every other Tuesday for their story hour and sitting on the floor in this back room. A rug would help immensely so if you have one you're not using think about donating it to the library.

For sometime now I have been wondering if it would be worthwhile to read "Plain Speaking", which is an oral biography of Harry Truman by Merle Miller. I finally made up my mind and started reading it and couldn't put it down. I hate profanity but if one can overlook the salty language I would recommend it as an entertaining and informative book. Mr. Truman read all three thousand books in the library at Independence by the time he was 14. After he became President he was asked if he used the Congressional Library. He replied, "I used it a great deal and the people there were just as nice and helpful as they could possibly be. What was probably the only thing in history to sleep on election night. He went to bed early but was called at midnight to be told he had lost New York. He went back to sleep and was called again at 6:30 a.m. to hear that he was elected.

Two more books I would recommend this week are "The Junkie Priest" by John D. Harris and "Through the Valley of the Kwai" by Ernest Gordon. Both of these are paper backs. The latter is a true story of human endurance and spiritual triumph by one of the few who survived the Japanese death camp. The story of Father Daniel Egan and his work with women drug addicts in the city of New York is told in "The Junkie Priest" and is well worth reading.
